

common user : root container user; this can access all database local user : this user inside pluggable database, this can access a pluggable database where you create it database security system security access and use of the database at system level such as username, password, disk space allocate system operation that user perform managed by system privilege data security

access and use of database objects and action that those users can have on the objects managed by object privilege system privilege

gaining access to database and privilege that impact on metadata create session, create table, create user, drop user, drop any table, backup any table, create any table, create index, create procedure, create view, create sequence, alter any table with admin option: pass granting system privilege option to other user object privilege;

manipulating the content of database objects object privilege vary from object to object.

table: select, delete, insert, update procedure: execute sequence: select with grant option: pass granting object privilege option to other user

RAM: customer;

RAM has given select privilege on customer table to Hari with grant option

HARI: hari can access the RAM's customer table, plus HARI can grant the select privilege to other user for example Shaym also.

user create, tablespace assign, quota assign, granting and revoking system privilege and object privilege account lock and unlock password change

passing the privilege with admission option and with grant option

A -> B (with admin option); B can give this privilege to other user